Lecture Content

This course uses a communicative-based approach to develop intermediate-level proficiency in the Spanish language. The subject material is presented in a functionally-based manner, and the content is expanded beyond basic needs and the immediate environment of the student to deal in greater detail with other areas (see below).

The materials used in the course emphasize situations that the student will likely encounter both in and outside of the classroom, and address the affective needs of the student by allowing for interpersonal communication. There is a particular focus on expansion of vocabulary and increased complexity of grammatical constructions; familiar thematic areas are covered in more detail, and functions are performed in a more sophisticated manner. Thematic areas include: amusements, parties and holidays; discussion of family and exploration of the different stages of life; the Latin presence in the United States; exploration of real and/or stereotypical situations of men and women; studies and the educational system; travels and vacationing. Functions include: meeting, greeting, taking leave of and addressing others; pointing out, describing and comparing people, things and places; indicating possession; discussing daily, preferred, leisure, possible, future and past actives; expressing desires, preferences, doubts; expressing reactions to real or possible circumstances; expressing admiration, disapproval, surprise; requesting and granting permission; prohibiting actions; ordering others to do something; giving advice; making suggestions; extending, accepting and declining invitations; giving and getting directions; answering the phone. The student learns to perform these functions both orally (through in-class teacher-student and/or student group interaction) and in writing (through in-class and at-home activities in the textbook, workbook, companion reader and companion web site). Written activities include true/false, multiple choice, fill-in and essay formats. There is also an effort to communicate much of the material in a cultural context. Numerous readings (in the textbook, workbook, on the web site, and, particularly, in the companion reader) present social, political and cultural differences and similarities within the various Hispanic cultures, as well as in comparison to other, non-Hispanic cultures. Other readings emphasize the Hispanic presence in the United States. Still others focus on the development and diversity of the language itself.

There are readings from important literary figures of Hispanic origin, as well as realia (genuine advertisements, newspaper articles, menus, proverbs, jokes, etc.). The student learns strategies to comprehend these readings such as recognizing cognates, using background knowledge to anticipate included information and identifying principal ideas. The table on the following page describes in detail the thematic areas covered in this course as well as corresponding functions, vocabulary and grammar constructions. The table need not be considered a strict prescription of the chronological order of presentation of the material.

Instructional Techniques

Comprehend intermediate-level spoken Spanish. Produce intermediate-level spoken Spanish. Read and understand intermediate-level Spanish. Express more advanced ideas and opinions in intermediate-level written Spanish. Acquire intermediate-level Spanish vocabulary. Understand and use intermediate-level Spanish grammatical structures. Recognize the more important cultural aspects of living in the Spanish-speaking worlds. Use technologies such as the Internet, online workbooks and multimedia to enhance learning. Value the process of language learning.

Reading Assignments

Reading assignments are used at every step through the semester to reinforce the vocabulary, grammatical structures, and communicative-oriented language skills being studied. In addition to helping the students develop linguistic proficiency, many of the reading selections provide practical insights into the culture(s) in which the language is used. Students will spend approximately two (2) hours weekly reading: Preparatory material in the textbook and their class notes; Literary and cultural reading selections from the textbook, online components of the textbook, and other materials, such as books, websites, and (physical and/or online) magazines and newspapers.

Writing Assignments

Writing assignments are used at every step through the semester to further develop structural, vocabulary, and communicative-oriented language skills. The textbook and other online or offline supplementary materials contain numerous writing activities in both short response and essay formats. Students will spend approximately two (2) hours weekly writing: Homework assignments in the textbook and their class notes; Compositions of appropriate length on topics related to themselves and/or the world around them; Other formats, such as: skits; poems; stories; advertisements; emails; letters; recipes; etc.

Out-of-class Assignments

In order to develop linguistic proficiency, students must spend time outside of the classroom with the material, completing speaking, listening, reading, and writing assignments in the textbook, workbook, and other online or offline supplementary materials. Students will spend approximately seven and a quarter (7.25) hours weekly completing work outside of the classroom such as: short response type exercises; reading comprehension; essay writing; story and/or skit creation; online language laboratory activities; oral presentation preparation; various culture-related exercises; listening to music or podcasts in the target language or related to the culture(s) in which the language is used; watching cultural videos and/or shows or movies in the target language or related to the culture(s) in which the language is used; etc.

Demonstration of Critical Thinking

1. Chapter exams and final exam (topics of exam sections include listening comprehension, reading comprehension, vocabulary, grammar, writing proficiency; formats of exam sections include true/false, multiple-choice, fill-in, answering questions, essays.)2. Written and Aural Homework (textbook, workbook, companion reader and/or Internet activities)3. Oral Performance4. Class Participation

Required Writing, Problem Solving, Skills Demonstration

Writing assignments are used at every step through the semester to exercise the structural, vocabulary and expressive skills being learned. The textbook, workbook and companion reader contain numerous writing activities in both short response and essay formats. In addition, there are teacher-guided web activities. In all of these writing activities, the student must not only apply knowledge of Spanish orthography and new vocabulary and grammatical constructions, but also utilize these linguistic elements in order to produce a coherent, organized written creation. Typical topics include the relation of information about the students immediate environment and the world at large, as well as comparisons and contrasts of that information with information about other people in the student=s immediate environment and in the global community.
